

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The invention provides a communication apparatus for transferring data received from a first network to a second network, in which the apparatus judges the destination of transfer of the received data and the secrecy level of the received data, and executes the transfer of the received data by a method based on the results of judgment.